This Project Will Be Necessary For South Carolina In Two Years Because of the Increased Production of the Corn Industry.

Columbia .- The production of corn in South Carolina has advanced to the point where a grain elevator will be needed within two years," said F. S. Terry in discussing the increase in this state.

According to statistics prepared by the state department of agriculture, the corn production for last year was about 45,000,000 bushels. Statistics obtained by the department show that about $6,000,000 worth of corp is brought from the West to this state each year. This means that the farmers buy about 7,690,000 bush els of corn annually. With average conditions it is expected that the corr production will reach 55,000,000 bush els this year, which would eliminate the Western corn producers from this
